

ONE DIES, 40 ESCAPE, IN NUMEROUS FIRES

$100,000 Damage Is Done in Various Parts of the Metropolitan District.

MANY FAMILIES IN PERIL New Brunswick Firemen in Danger by Falling of Factory Wall.

One man died of suffocation and forty other persons escaped yesterday from burning dwellings. At New Brunswick, N. J., fire destroyed the four-story fur factory of L. Balk & Co. in the heart of the business district, and caused damage estimated at $100,000.

The dead man was David McGrath, 62, who was found wrapped in blankets on the floor of his room at 624 Metropolitan avenue, Williamsburg. Firemen who searched the house after the fire started in McGrath's room, did not find him until a second view. It was believed he rolled off the bed in an effort to get to the window when he was overcome. Other tenants escaped. The damage was placed at $500. McGrath leaves a daughter, Mrs. Charlotte Woods of 26 Manhattan avenue, Brooklyn.

Eight families made a quick escape from the four-story apartment house at 3745 Third avenue, The Bronx, yesterday morning, when a fire started which caused about $10,000 damage. The flames were seen coming from the top floor apartment of Samuel Breitman, who escaped with his wife and five children.

Policeman Off Duty Rescuer.

Fourteen persons escaped from a three-story dwelling at 5347 Fulton street, Brooklyn, when their lives were saved by a police officer on duty. The fire started in the kitchen of the apartment house, and the firemen who were called to the scene, and standing on the roof, caught several tenants as they jumped from the windows above.

Among the tenants thus rescued were Mrs. Esther Holder, a widow, teacher at Public School 11, Brooklyn; her daughter, 11; Harry D. Norris, a boarder in the apartment; William Lawton, his wife, Edith, and their daughters, Thelma, 14, and Edith, 10. Ladders were used by Hook and Ladder Company 107, and Firemen Thomas Lewisohn and William Wagner carried out Mrs. Madeline Cancelli and her husband, Charles, and their children, Charles, Jr., George and James.

Damage was done to the shoe store of Louis J. Ball on the first floor. The total loss was placed at $10,000.

Fire in Magazine Office.

Fire started in the store room of the office of Bernard McEaden, publisher of the Physical Culture, on the third floor of a twenty-two story building, 113 West Fourth street, just as 150 young women were reporting for work. They were held outside the building until the flames were extinguished. The damage was slight.

Lives of several hundred persons were endangered by the falling of the front wall of a burning building at New Brunswick. The wall crumbled a few minutes after the firemen arrived and while the fire lines were still being formed. There was a roar as the wall collapsed and the avalanche of bricks tumbled into the street.

Near the factory was a large gas tank of the Public Service Gas Company and preparations were made to let the gas out into the Raritan River, but this was found to be unnecessary. The firemen succeeded in restricting the flames to the building, although sparks threatened to ignite many other structures in the vicinity.

Flames shot out of the hardware store of N. Matheson at 612 Amsterdam avenue yesterday morning. The damage was $1,000.

BOYS FIND DYNAMITE IN LOT NEAR THE PENNA. STATION

Explosion Appeared Near at Several Stops Before Explosive Reaches Police Station—Three Sticks Cashed by Lads Near Original Find.

Three boys, in prying about yesterday afternoon in a lot surrounded by a high board fence in Thirty-third street, near Eighth avenue, opposite the Pennsylvania terminal, found six sticks of dynamite in a parcel, wrapped in brown paper. They began playing with the sticks and were about to set them up as targets for rocks, when the oldest, Rudolph Schott, aged 11, of 352 West Forty-fifth street, saw on the brown paper "caution" and "explosive, 40 per cent. strength."

With Schott were Gerald Hans, aged 9, of 348 West Forty-fifth street, and a third youth. The two small boys thought it would be fun to explode the sticks. But Schott suggested that maybe they would get something for them if they took them to a policeman. They saved three of the sticks, burying them near the corner of the fence.

With the other three they walked to Eighth avenue and Thirty-fifth street and met two policemen. Schott planted himself in front of one policeman.

"Here's some dangerous stuff, officer," he announced. "I says explosive note!" But the big policeman, with a grin at his brother policeman, took a good natured swing at the lad's head, so Rudolph told the story last night, with the remark: "Get along with you, you fough kid." Rudolph said that as he dug the policeman's arm one of the dynamite sticks almost got loose and tumbled on the pavement. Then Rudolph and his two friends walked on to Eighth avenue and Thirty-third street, where they met Policeman Joseph Cohen. "Here's some dangerous stuff," said Rudolph. "Look at this." Cohen looked and exclaimed: "Good night! Give me that!" Cohen set the dynamite carefully on the pavement and then sent a signal for another policeman, and in the time the dynamite was removed to the West Thirtieth street police station and forwarded to the bureau of combustibles of the Fire Department.

At 11 o'clock last night, nine hours after the dynamite was found, Rudolph said that none of the policeman had said to question him further. He wished to know if he had been looked at. Late last night he told Patrolman Cohen of the three sticks that had been buried, and he could not get them because the gate to the lot would be locked. Late last night the police entered the lot and got the three sticks.

C. L. WATERBURY HAS $10, OWES $93,230

Member of Widely Known Family Files Petition in Bankruptcy.

Cleveland Livingston Waterbury of 61 East Sixty-sixth street, member of the well known Waterbury family of this city, filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy yesterday in the United States District Court, in which he stated his liabilities amounted to $93,230 and that he had but $10 in cash with which to meet his debts. In the petition Mr. Waterbury states he is engaged in the advertising business with Van Patton, Inc., 40 East Forty-second street.

Among creditors named are Henry Payne Whitney, who loaned Waterbury $20,000 in 1914; the estate of James M. Waterbury, Jr., $24,500 for loans in 1901 and 1902; Evans & Barnhill, an advertising concern in 1914; East Forty-third street, $18,200 for overdraft commissions; Greenville F. Waterbury, his brother, a loan of $5,000; the Morris Plan of this city, $2,000; and the Kew Hotel Corporation, $1,000 for a judgment.

Mr. Waterbury, who is the son of James M. Waterbury and brother of the late James M. Waterbury, Jr., and of Lawrence Waterbury, the noted polo player, was employed as an advertising salesman by Evans & Barnhill until last August and recently found it difficult to handle the enough advertising to meet his living expenses, according to several of his friends. Waterbury has had various ventures in business, the gold fields and theatrical producing. In 1906 he married Miss Mildred Booth Grossman, granddaughter of Edwin Booth, the tragedian.

Some time before his marriage Mr. Waterbury opened theatrical offices in the Knickerbocker Theater Building and was interested in the production of several acts. He was mentioned during his career as theatrical manager and producer as a creditor of Belle L. Ashlyn, a vaudeville actress of 122 West Forty-ninth street, to whom Mr. Waterbury had advanced $600. The family fortunes of the Waterburys faced a severe slump when the National Cordage Company, of which James M. Waterbury was the head, failed in 1921.

The will of Joseph T. Marean, former Justice of the Supreme Court, filed in the Surrogate's office, Brooklyn, yesterday, disposes of an estate estimated at about $500,000. The former Justice died February 8, this year, while in Winter Park, Fla. He was 80 years old.

"If it is ever necessary for my wife's happiness that she shall require more money, $3,000 additional shall be paid to her each year by the executors of the estate."

A bequest of $3,000 made to Edward Gallagher, a former chauffeur, is revoked by a codicil. Several bequests are made to personal friends and former clerks. The executors are Mrs. Marean, Andrew P. Van Thun and William H. Good.

JURY GETS LIQUOR, WOMAN CONVICTED

Bottle of Evidence Passed Around Just as Talesmen Retire.

A jury in Nassau County Court blinked its eyes, smacked its lips and exchanged grins yesterday after drinking some of the evidence offered by detectives in the trial of Mrs. Mary McKilligan of Manhasset, charged with selling liquor. She was found guilty. This is the second instance recorded in courts in this vicinity in which the jury has tasted the evidence. In the first instance, which was in Brooklyn, the jury returned an acquittal.

The charges against Mrs. McKilligan were based on the discovery of a considerable quantity of liquor, which the detectives said was of noteworthy strength.

"We may as well let the jury pass on the evidence for themselves," suggested Judge Lewis J. Smith, as an Assistant District Attorney, Mr. Edwards, started to offer a chemical analysis. A bottle was taken from one of the cases and handed into the jury box.

It passed from juror to juror. Only the gurgling as the jurors sampled it and the smacking of their lips was heard for a few moments in the court room. One juror was heard to murmur, "Polli, two of the principal playhouses here, were ordered closed to-night by the Board of Commissioners, the governing body of the District of Columbia."

SEVEN WASHINGTON THEATERS CLOSED

Officials Charge Structural Weaknesses in Playhouses.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 18.—Seven theaters, including the New National and Polli, two of the principal playhouses here, were ordered closed to-night by the Board of Commissioners, the governing body of the District of Columbia.

The order was issued after an inspection of playhouses in the district had been completed by a board of five engineers following the recent collapse of the Knickerbocker Theater, which cost the lives of ninety-eight persons.

Other theaters closed were the Metropolitan, Columbia, Maryland and Foraker, motion picture houses, and the Cosmos, vaudeville and motion picture. The Metropolitan and the Columbia are two of the larger downtown theaters. The former is owned by the Crandall Company, which also owned the Knickerbocker.

The report of the engineers on which the order was issued was not made public, but members said that "in most cases" structural weakness and inadequate fire protection had been disclosed by their investigation.

JERKED UP TO SAFETY FROM SUBWAY TRACK

Man Pushed Off Platform Barely Rescued.

Passengers on an island platform of the Lexington avenue subway at Fourteenth street yesterday afternoon rescued Thomas Meinhardt, 48, of 903 East 15th street, from the path of a north-bound express train as it rushed into the station.

Meinhardt was standing near the edge of the platform when a crowd surged forward and pushed him to the tracks. When he saw the express train approaching he called for help and several men bent over the edge of the platform, took hold of his arms and lifted him from the track. They were just in time, for the forward car of the train was so near that its framework struck his legs as he was being swung to the platform. He suffered bruises and lacerations of the right side and thigh, and was taken to Bellevue after he had been attended at the station by an ambulance surgeon.

In the meantime he will be investigated by a probation officer.

Duffy is a magazine salesman. It also is alleged that he beat his wife when she interfered as he was whipping the boy. Neighbors called a policeman and caused his arrest.

MISS NORMAND HAS CHANGED HER HOME

Movie Actress Forced From Fatigue to Seek Quiet in Seclusion.

LOS ANGELES, Feb. 18.—The failure of Edward F. Sands, missing secretary of William Desmond Taylor, slain film director, to respond to an offer of immunity from District Attorney Woolwine, left the investigation where it was, when it started, that official said late today.

Mr. Woolwine last night, in response to a letter purporting to have been dictated by Sands, issued a letter to the press stating Sands would not be prosecuted on an old charge of embezzlement if he would surrender and tell what he knew of the Taylor slaying.

The District Attorney said he had no reason to believe the supposed Sands letter was genuine, but declared his offer of immunity stood irrespective of this consideration. Police investigators and the District Attorney have insisted from the start that Sands could furnish the key to the mystery.

Mabel Normand, film actress, one of the last persons who saw Taylor before he was shot, sent from her residence in the Wilshire district to an unnamed address today. Friends said she was seeking seclusion to get some rest, made necessary by the stress of repeated interviews concerning the case.

Official investigators said Miss Normand had given satisfactory responses to all questions put to her, and expressed no interest concerning her removal to-day.

Claude G. Normand, Mabel Normand's father, said last night that he didn't believe a Los Angeles report that his daughter and her chauffeur had disappeared and that the authorities there wanted to find their new address. He said he and Mrs. Normand had not heard from the film star since early in the week and were not expecting any word aside from her usual letters. Mr. Normand was found at work in Stapleton Hall, a motion picture and dancing pavilion, where the Normands home, 125 St. Mark's place, New Brighton, N. Y., Normand could not be found.

MANY SEE MAN DANGLE, THEN FALL TO HIS DEATH

Window Cleaner Killed in West 57th Street.

More than a score of passersby, including several women, saw Daniel Donohue, aged 48, of 300 East Fifty-seventh street, fall to his death from a window on the third floor of the apartment at 200 West Fifty-seventh street, fall to his death from a window on the third floor of the apartment at 200 West Fifty-seventh street. Donohue was cleaning a window when his foot slipped on the ice covered sill.

The spot where the man's body struck is directly opposite Calvary Baptist Church and at the time the street was crowded with automobiles and pedestrians.

Donohue's cry for help as his foot slipped was heard plainly by those walking by, and many looked up thinking a burglary was being committed. What they saw was the figure of a man madly fighting to save himself. His feet were dangling and he was holding with both hands to the wooden framework. Before help could reach him from inside the building one hand lost its grip and the next instant, while seven feet from the ground, he plunged downward. He struck on a railing in front of the house and rolled across the sidewalk, just missing a group of men.

Patrolman William Drennan of the West Thirtieth street police station and a doorman of the apartment carried Donohue's body into the basement. Dr. Berinstein of Flower Hospital said that death occurred when he struck the railing. The body was removed to the morgue.

WIFE'S BODY LOST, GETS $2,500 VERDICT

Seigrist Sued Cemetery Trustees for Negligence in 1918 Flu Epidemic.

Charles Seigrist, of 1822 Amsterdam avenue, whose wife was buried in St. Raymond's Cemetery, The Bronx, in 1918, without a record as to the exact place of burial, yesterday recovered $2,500 from the cemetery company for the loss of her body. The verdict was returned by a jury in the Bronx Supreme Court before Justice John M. Tierney. Seigrist's action, as Justice Tierney pointed out in his charge, was based on the contention the cemetery officials and their subordinates were negligent in maintaining cemetery records.

Mrs. Seigrist died in October, 1918, when the worst influenza epidemic in the history of the country was at its peak. St. Raymond's Cemetery was receiving from forty to fifty bodies a day instead of the five or six normally received, and this condition, aggravated by a strike of grave diggers, operated to delay burials.

When the body of Mrs. Seigrist was taken to the cemetery Mr. Seigrist was informed by the superintendent it would not be possible to bury it immediately. Seigrist left the body in a receiving vault and the superintendent assured him he would be notified of the date of burial. A short time later Dr. Arthur J. O'Leary, Health Commissioner of the Bronx, learned that between seventy and eighty bodies were lying in the receiving vault and he directed the cemetery authorities to bury them immediately. The cemetery complied by depositing the bodies one beside the other in a trench instead of individual graves. Employees were required to mark each coffin box and it was in this process that the body of Mrs. Seigrist was lost. Twenty-five graves later were opened in an effort to locate it.

JAMES M. COX SENDS $200 TO WILSON FUND

Will Make Another Contribution in Ohio.

A check for $200 from James M. Cox, Democratic Presidential candidate in 1920, was received yesterday at the headquarters of the Woodrow Wilson Foundation, 150 Nassau street. In a letter the former Ohio Governor said he also would make a contribution to the Ohio foundation workers, who are being directed by Newton D. Baker, Wilson's Secretary of War.

Contributions from many Republicans, living in all parts of the country, were recorded at headquarters, showing the interest in the success of the foundation designed to raise $1,000,000 or more to endow rewards for distinguished public service. Morton D. Hull of Chicago and Logan Ray of Springfield, two of the best known Republicans in the State, were reported to be giving their active support to the Illinois campaign.

Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Baruch sent checks for $500 each. Hugh C. Wallace, former Ambassador to France, has contributed $200. Three grandchildren of Mr. Wilson, Francis B. Sayre, Jr., Eleanor Sayre and Woodrow Wilson Sayre, took pennies to the headquarters of the foundation in Boston to contribute to the fund.

UNEMPLOYED VOICE WOES.

Fast Siders Hold Meeting Without Slightest Disorder.

More than a hundred unemployed men and women held a meeting yesterday afternoon in the square at Tenth street and Second avenue, where several voiced their woes over being out of work. There was not the slightest disorder and no attempt was made by extra policemen or prosecuting officers to break up the meeting, which was held under the auspices of the Unemployment Council made up of delegates from various unions in this city.

At 2 o'clock this afternoon there will be a similar demonstration at the same place.

N.Y.U. ALUMNI HONOR DEN I. F. JOHNSON

Scores of Businesses to Be Professions in Two Decades, Says Educator.

Dr. Joseph French Johnson, dean of the School of Commerce of New York University, was the chief guest at a dinner last night at the Hotel Biltmore, attended by 800 of the 2,500 alumni sent from the school by Dr. Johnson.

A medal commemorating of the dean's long service with the university was presented to him by Philip J. Warner of the class of 1911, and reproductions given to each guest as souvenirs. A bust of Dr. Johnson, the gift of the faculty, also was presented by Prof. Cleveland F. Bacon. The School of Commerce, organized in 1900 with an enrollment of 85, now has 7,834 students and is the largest of its kind in the country.

"During the next twenty years I believe we shall see remarkable progress in the development and status of university schools of commerce. The time is near when our leading bankers will be the graduates of university schools of commerce and when the appointment of an untrained man to membership of the Federal Reserve Board at Washington will be as unlikely as the elevation of a shyster lawyer to a seat in the Supreme Court of the United States.

"A banker who then is thought of as a professional man is today we think of the lawyer, the physician, the architect, the engineer, the certified public accountant. Other business callings also will be gradually lifted to a professional status, such as advertising, insurance, management, industrial engineering, journalism, secretaries of chambers of commerce, brokerage, especially in investment securities, railroad and steamship transportation, and I am also inclined to include book publishing, merchandising, the management of large hotels and restaurants, city management and the conduct of the multi-form business activities of the nation, the State and the municipality."

Joseph A. Broderick, '06, vice-president of the National Bank of Commerce and president of the alumni body of the school, was toastmaster. Other speakers were Chancellor Elmer Ellsworth Brown of New York University, Prof. Jeremiah W. Jenks and Harry A. Hept of the class of 1906; Leo Greendlinger, '07; Raymond H. Conyn, '14; George V. McLaughlin, '10; Malcolm Simpson, '13; Jacob Golieb, '11, and John C. Jones.

JOBS FOR BOYS PLENTY.

That the Manhattan employment situation is bettering was the statement made yesterday by Madeleine L. R. Satterlee, Supervisor of the Juvenile Department of the State Employment Bureau. Miss Satterlee said there were plenty of jobs open for boys at $3 to $10 a week. Boy Scouts are in great demand by individuals and concerns desiring juvenile labor.
